

ROMANO VALENTINA, DMV, Ph.D. student

She is a Ph.D. student in “Animal Health and Zoonosis” at the Department of Veterinary Medicine of the University of Bari (2021-2024). She had a specialization school’s degree in Infectious Diseases, Prophylaxis and Veterinary Police cum Laude (2018-2021) and graduated in Veterinary Medicine cum Laude at University of Bari (2013-2018). She worked (2013-2021) as a veterinary practitioner engaged in clinical activity. Her area of interest is the veterinary dermatology and infection disease of animals. She is currently working on the role of Malassezia spp. in pets and their owners and in the isolation and diagnosis of pathogenic fungi and yeasts of animals in the Mycology laboratory.